Letters of Transmittal

The Honourable
Gordon S. Wyant, Q.C.
Minister of Justice and
Attorney General

Her Honour the Honourable Vaughn Solomon Schofield,
Lieutenant Governor of Saskatchewan

May it Please Your Honour:

In accordance with section 63(1) of The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act, I have the pleasure to transmit to your Honour the 2015-16 annual report of the administration of this Act and the Regulations within each government institution during the period April 1, 2015 to March 31, 2016.

Respectfully submitted,

Gordon S. Wyant, Q.C.
Minister of Justice and Attorney General

Governing Legislation

The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act

The Act has two main purposes:

1. It provides a right of access to records in the possession or control of provincial government institutions.
2. It establishes protection of privacy rules specifying how the government collects, uses and discloses personal information.

Government Institutions

The Act applies to all ministries, secretariats and similar agencies of the Executive Government of Saskatchewan. The Regulations extend that coverage to a broad range of Crown corporations, boards, commissions and others prescribed as government institutions.

The Act applies individually to each government institution. The head of the government institution, as defined in the Act, is responsible for many decisions under the Act, including responding to applications for access. Under section 60 of the Act, the head may delegate the powers to one or more officers of the government institution.

Access to Records

The Act gives individuals the right of access to records of information in any form—this includes information that is written, photographed, recorded or stored in any manner—in the possession or control of Saskatchewan government institutions. The Act sets out the rules that govern the access process, including:

- what government institutions are required to provide in their responses to access to information requests;
- the collection of fees to prepare the records for response, including when to provide a cost estimate and when the head may waive those fees;
- a 30-day time limit for a response, which may be extended in accordance with the Act;
- reasons for which access to all or part of a record may be denied; and
- the circumstances under which the applicant may request a review by the Information and Privacy Commissioner.

Privacy

The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act establishes rules for the collection, use and disclosure of personal information by the Government of Saskatchewan and its agencies. These rules help to protect individual privacy. Each government institution is responsible for protecting the privacy of personal information in its possession or control.

Ministry of Justice

Role of the Ministry of Justice

The Ministry of Justice (the Ministry) provides direction and support to government institutions and to the public as it relates to The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act. The Ministry:

- provides legal advice to government;
- provides a leadership role within government on access and privacy issues, including the collection of statistical information related to access to information requests and the preparation of this annual report;
- prepares and maintains access and privacy tools, such as guidelines, checklists and administrative procedures;
- provides and supports training and awareness regarding access and privacy; and
- maintains a website providing information to the public, government institutions and local authorities to help with understanding both the access to information and the privacy components of the legislation (www.saskatchewan.ca).

Significant Activities in 2015-16

The Ministry continued efforts to raise awareness of obligations under the Act. This included:

- delivering training sessions to government and local authority employees;
- working collaboratively with stakeholders and clients to find innovative ways to approach their needs and improve knowledge of the law and consistency of practice;
- hosting a successful Saskatchewan Connections conference on access, privacy, security, records management and health information management in May 2016;
- continuing the development and updating of standardized guidelines and interpretive materials to improve understanding and compliance with the law;
- working with federal-provincial-territorial counterparts to share information and knowledge of access and privacy practice; and
- continuing to respond to requests for assistance from government, local authorities and the public to help with understanding and compliance with access and privacy matters.

Reports

The Ministry collects and reports statistical information regarding the exercise of and compliance with access rights under the Act. These reports provide statistical information both by individual government institutions and by the total provincial government administration.

The statistical reports are in the Appendix and include:

Table A - Freedom of Information Statistical Summary Report

Table A provides an overview of access to information requests processed by all government institutions. It includes the total number of applications received by government, the status of the applications, the processing time to complete the applications, and the fees estimated and collected to process requests for the fiscal years 2011-12 through 2015-16.

Table B - Exemptions Used to Deny Access

Table B presents a statistical summary of the exemptions applied to deny access for the fiscal years 2011-12 through 2015-16. These statistics are presented by mandatory exemptions, discretionary exemptions and other.

Table C - Freedom of Information Statistics by Institution - Applications for General Information

Table C is a statistical report showing the number of general information requests received by each government institution, the action taken on those requests and the fees estimated and collected. If an institution is not listed, it did not receive any general information requests during the 2015-16 fiscal year.

Applications for general information are requests for records in the possession or under the control of a government institution other than those described as personal information in section 24 of the Act.

Table D - Freedom of Information Statistics by Institution - Applications for Personal Information

Table D shows the number of personal information requests received by each institution, the action taken on those requests and the fees estimated and collected. If a government institution is not listed, it did not receive any personal information requests during the 2015-16 fiscal year.

Applications for personal information are, as described in section 24 of the Act, requests for records about an identifiable person that are in the possession or under the control of a government institution.

Analysis

Number of Access to Information Requests Processed

In 2015-16, provincial government institutions processed a total of 1,575 access to information requests – 595 requests for personal information and 980 for general information. This is a 24% decrease from the 1,960 requests processed in 2014-15, and a decrease over the previous four-year average of 2,065.

The number of requests for general information dropped 21% from 1,181 in 2014-15 to 980 in 2015-16. The number of requests for personal information also dropped 31%, from 779 in 2014-15 to 595 in 2015-16.

2011-12 to 2015-16

Access Request Processing Times

The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act provides a 30-calendar-day time period for responding to access requests. The provisions in section 12 of the Act allow the extension of the response time up to an additional 30 days in limited circumstances.

On average, in the fiscal years 2011-12 to 2015-16, provincial government institutions have responded to access requests within 30 calendar days 82% of the time. When combined with the allowable extension of 30 calendar days under section 12 of the Act, the average response rate rose to 95% over this same five-year period. In 2015-16, government institutions responded within 30 days 72% of the time and within 60 days 90% of the time. Both of these response rates are below the five-year average.

Application Outcomes – General Information Requests

The following chart shows application outcomes for access to information requests for general information. This includes results for the 2015-16 fiscal year and the average of the four previous fiscal years (2011-12 through 2014-15).

In 2015-16, 30% of requests for general information were fully granted, which is below the four-year average of 44%. The number of access requests for general information that were partially granted was 27%, up from the previous four-year average of 18%. The number of access requests for general information where the records did not exist rose from the previous four-year average of 31% to 35% in 2015-16.

The number of access requests fully denied in 2015-16 was 6%, which is equal to the four-year average.

Table A, in the Appendix, shows the status of applications received by government institutions including: if access to the records was granted, denied, or partially granted; if the Act was not required for access; if the records did not exist; or if the records could not be found.

Application Outcomes (General Requests)
2015-16 Compared to Four-year Average (2011-12 to 2014-15)

Note: Numbers are rounded and may not add up to 100 per cent

Application Outcomes – Personal Information Requests

Figure 4, below, shows the outcomes for access to information requests for personal information. This includes the results for the 2015-16 fiscal year and the average of the four previous fiscal years (2011-12 through 2014-15).

In 2015-16, 33% of access requests for personal information were fully granted, up from the previous four-year average of 26%. The number of access requests partially granted in 2015-16 was 45%, also up from the previous four-year average of 40%. In the 2015-16 fiscal year, 2% of requests for personal information were fully denied, which is up a small amount from the four-year average of 1%. Finally, the number of access requests for personal information where the records did not exist dropped from the previous four-year average of 32% to 19% in 2015-16.

Application Outcomes (Personal Requests)
2015-16 Compared to Four-year Average (2011-12 to 2014-15)

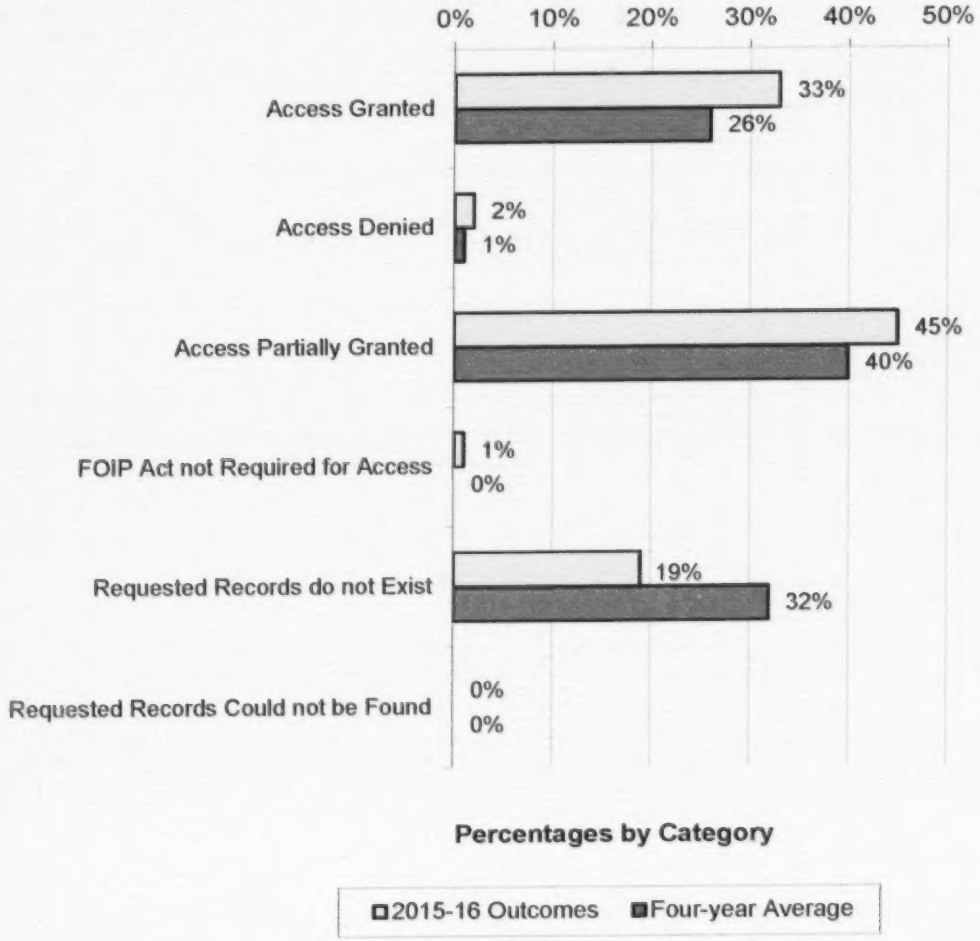

Figure 4 - See Tables A and D in the Appendix for more details

Note: Numbers are rounded and may not add up to 100 per cent.

Application Outcomes – General and Personal Requests Combined

The chart below shows how government institutions have responded to all access requests (both general and personal combined) in 2015-16, along with the average of the previous four fiscal years.

For the 2015-16 fiscal year, 65% of all access requests were fully (31%) or partially (34%) granted. This is higher than 2014-15 and slightly higher to the previous four-year average of 64%. In 2015-16, access was fully denied 5% of the time and records did not exist for 29% of the access requests processed.

Application Outcomes (General and Personal Requests Combined)
2015-16 Compared to Four-year Average (2011-12 to 2014-15)

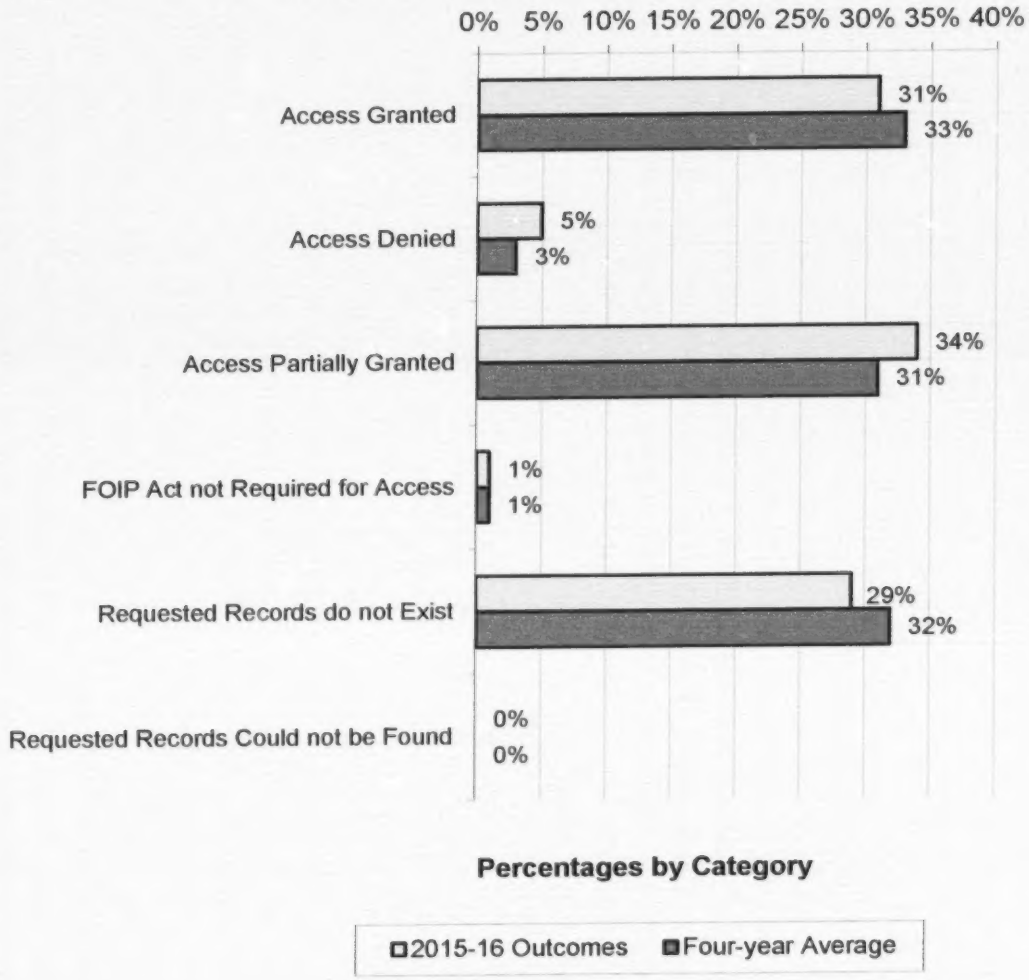

Figure 5 - Note: Numbers are rounded and may not add up to 100 per cent.

Application Outcomes Where Records Existed – General and Personal Requests Combined

The following graph shows how government institutions responded to access requests (both general and personal requests combined) where records existed that were relevant to the access request. Requests where records did not exist have been removed from the calculations.

In the 2015-16 fiscal year, access was granted in whole or in part 91% of the time (44% were fully granted and 47% were partially granted) when records existed. The previous four-year average showed that 49% of requests were fully granted and 46% were partially granted. Access was fully denied 7% of the time, up from the four-year average of 4%.

Appeals to the Information and Privacy Commissioner

Section 49 of The Freedom of Information and Protection of Privacy Act provides applicants with a right of review by the Information and Privacy Commissioner:

- where an applicant is not satisfied with the decision of a head pursuant to section 7, 12 or 37 of the Act;
- where a head fails to respond to an application for access to a record within the required time; or
- where an applicant requests a correction of personal information pursuant to clause 32(1)(a) and the correction is not made.

Section 33 of the Act provides the Information and Privacy Commissioner with the authority to conduct privacy investigations.

Further details on reviews and investigations can be found in the Information and Privacy Commissioner's Annual Report available at www.oipc.sk.ca.

The total fees estimated can vary significantly from the total fees collected. The total fees estimated is the cost assessed to process applications as determined by the fee structure outlined in the Regulations. The total fees collected refer to fees actually collected from the applicants. The applicant has several options in regard to the fees. The applicant can: modify the application in order to reduce the costs, request a waiver of the fees, or decide not to pay the fees and therefore not receive access to the records. The Regulations (Section 9) are very specific regarding the types of circumstances in which the Head can waive fees.

The numbers in these columns indicate every time an exemption was used to deny access fully or in part. The exemption may be used several times in relation to an individual application and more than one exemption may be used for each application.

The total number of exemptions applied in 2013-14 rose significantly over previous years. This is a result of more consistent application of all available exemptions to records (rather than applying only the primary exemption when more than one is applicable). This is a practice encouraged by the Office of the Information and Privacy Commissioner and supported by the Access and Privacy Branch, Ministry of Justice, as a best practice.
